Summary	Stops local units of government from imposing excise taxes on food or beverages. Among other things, this bill bars taxes on soft drinks. Note: This bill is an appropriate philosophical statement of principle but lacks authority because it prescribes and protects free exchange from encroachment.	One bill in a broader package that redistributes $200 million of state revenue to certain businesses. Eligible companies would get cash subsidies for up to 10 years equal to half or all of the income tax paid by their employees.	One bill in a broader package that allows certain well-connected real estate developers to capture a portion of the tax revenue collected by government within a specific geographic location, including sales, use, and income tax revenue totaling as much as $1 billion.	To out the state income tax from the current 4.05 percent to 4.05 percent over two years. And then gradually reduce the rate by a quarter of a percentage point annually until it reaches 3.9% if lawmakers pass $1 billion in the state's rainy day fund. Note: 3.9% is the rate taxpayers were promised it would roll back down to when it was raised to 4.05% in 2007 by Gov. Granholm.	One bill in a package that overhauls the public school employee retirement system in order to incentivize fully funded, contribution-driven retirement accounts. This is accomplished by establishing a system of generous employer contributions in the defined contribution system and greater cost-sharing in the traditional pension option.	Repeals a rule that prohibits leaving an unattended vehicle running other than on a public street or highway. Allows individuals to "warm up" a car in their driveway without fear of a potential fine.	Closes various loopholes that public school districts and local governments have exploited to avoid having to sell a property to a charter or private school.	To exempt residential painters and decorators from state licensure mandates and fees.	To reduce barriers to the teaching profession by allowing someone who holds a occupational license or certification from the state to teach in a career and technical education program.	To allow a landlord who is a single person or married couple and organized as a limited liability company to present themselves in an eviction proceeding if they choose to do so without having to hire a lawyer.	To authorize roughly $150 million in state subsidies for grocery stores operating in urban areas where the nearest store is more than 1 mile. This would come from money earmarked to an existing business subsidy program.	To bring Michigan law in line with the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling in the Citizens United vs. FEC case, which said political spending is protected under First Amendment free speech rights as long as it is done independently of a candidate or party.	To add a workforce training payment program as an alternative to payment of outstanding "driver responsibility fees" ("bad driver tax").	To prohibit a state department from enacting rules (regulations) more strict than required by federal standards unless required by the state law or the department director can demonstrate need to do so.	To impose a state licensing regime on pain management facilities.	To repeal a law that requires Intermediate School District special education programs to give preference in hiring to individuals who worked for a regular school district's special education program, or one run by a state agency.	A bill to expand the number of tax increment financing zones in the "transition zone" program. These are geographic areas that are allowed to "capture" a portion of any increases in the state portion of school property tax revenue, and use the money to partially subsidize college tuition for local students.
