

Politically Georgia

The GOP Health Care Divide and Jason Estevez ...

SAVE TO SPOTIFY SHARE SUBSCRIBE DESCRIPTION

Today in Washington

- President Donald Trump will receive an intelligence briefing and sign an executive order focused on strengthening foster care systems.
- The House and Senate are done for the week.

Ad watch

U.S. Sen. Jon Ossoff, D-Ga., spoke to the Rotary Club of Atlanta in August. (Adam Beam/AJC)

Americans for Prosperity-Georgia says it is spending more than $1 million on a new ad criticizing Democratic U.S. Sen. Jon Ossoff for voting against a law to indefinitely extend some federal tax cuts.

The law, known by President Donald Trump's "big, beautiful" nickname, made permanent some tax cuts passed during Trump's first term. But it also included big budget cuts to pay for them, including slashing spending for Medicaid and food assistance programs.

“When Ossoff puts his party’s progressive agenda first, his bad vote ripples through every Georgia household,” the ad’s narrator says. “Ossoff’s vote would have made life hard and hope feel even further away.”

The ad will run on digital platforms across the state. AFP-Georgia, the state chapter of the conservative political advocacy organization started by the Koch brothers, says it has knocked on 100,000 doors already as it ramps up its ground game ahead of the 2026 election.

Shoutout