PR2025-020	2/8/2025	Ben Gruber	In a December 2023 Milwaukee Journal Sentinel article titled "'I was the Black warden': DNR's first African American warden recounts struggle for respect" by journalist Laura Schulte, I take the following reference: "...In a letter sent to Evers in mid-July, another former warden pointed out issues within the program that led to their resignation. The former warden, who asked not to be named out of fear of retaliation, pointed out that once they were out in the field, opportunities to learn were limited, and those in charge of training seemed to carry biases based on the skin color of the new wardens. "I feel like I was trained haphazardly because of the color of my skin," the former warden wrote. "The Wisconsin Warden service has a history of targeting black men and creating obstacles for them not to succeed. I want my training experience to be investigated and I want this to never happen to another black man trying to become a Conservation Warden." The letter went unanswered....." End quote. I am requesting the record of the letter referenced by the former employee. I believe, but cannot confirm, that the author of that letter would likely be a Kevin Patterson.	9/12/2025	Provided
